His visits to that city were regular, and arrangements had been made for an immediate union, when the bride-elect was stricken down by typhoid fever, and in spite of all which skill and care could do, died. We witnessed the agony of her lover as he bent in speechless, tearless abstraction over the satin-lined The Fate of Theodosia Barr-One of the Saddest Tragedies in After the melancholy journey to Oakdale the young man returned to Dubuque. Nervous fever set in, and a peculiar hallucination seized him that his lost one was present in the room, draped in the same garb which had enveloped her clay. All remonstrance was in vain. He minutely described her dress, her amerance in To the Editor of the Daily Graphic.) In yours of Tuesday, you have an article concerning the daughter of Aaron Burr. She was, indeed, the good angel of that misguided man, and to James Parton we owe our knowledge of her sweet and lovely character.

What I am about to relate may be traditionary in a degree, but still may possess a peculiar interest to the reader. It was understood, at the time, that the causes of Theodosia's coming north to her father was because of the differences between herself and husband regarding Burr. Theodosia defended her father's actions, while Governor Alston denounced them. Governor Alston denounced them. This was the cause of a separation. Theodosia embarked in a vessel for New York, in the care of Mr. Grey a wealthy Carolinian. She took two of her children with her, also a large quantity of family plate. Tidings of her departure reached New York and her arrival was anxiously waited by the losely old man. But, alas! she never came. The bereaved father gave her up as dead; whether the vessel faundered at sea, or what happens of the property of the proper sel foundered at sea, or what happened they never knew. At this time, my great grandfather, Phillip Freneau, what you came for; I have received no tidings; I am desolate! Cincinnati Industrial Exposition Buildings, 1873.

We present our readers above with a view of the buildings of the CENCINNATI INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITION, in which the Fourth Annual Exposition is to be held from September 3 to October 4, 1873.

This great Exhibition, which is the foremost among similar enterprises in this country, is already well known to many of our readers, but we give some details which are of general interest.

The buildings are situated in the heart of the city, and are five in number, including the Art Hall, which is connected with the rest by a bridge across Elm street, shown at the left of the picture. They furnish to exhibitors nearly eight acres of space, the Power Hall alone comprising over an acre of every variety of machinery in motion. The Exposition is divided into sixteen departments, and each of the great halls is filled with the myriad products of American industrial enterprise, displayed in the most attractive forms and with endless profusion. Itmay be justly termed a popular school of art and industry, teaching by object lessons of the most vivid and attractive description.

Its immense popularity is partly due to the central location of Cincinnati, but mainly to the liberal character of its management, which is in the hands of the three commercial associations of the city. There being no stockholding interest, all its revenues are directly expended in increasing its popular attractions, while the high character and impartiality of its awards has made them eagerly sought after by exhibitors from every part of the Union. The national character of the Exposition is indicated by the half-fare arrangements which last year extended over 15,000 miles of railway, or nearly one-third the entire mileage of the United States; and by the attendance of over 600,000 visitors. A large increase is expected this year, under the newly adopted system of school excursions at reduced rates of admission.
